THE ASSASSINATION.

The Queen's Reply to the Parliamentary Address.

In the Heuse of Lordson the 4th inst. Viscount Sidney, the Lord Chamberlain, and in the House of Commons Lord Probythe, Comptroller of the Household, brought up her Majesty's reply to the address in reference to the assessination of President Lincoln, which was as fol-

lews:—
I entirely participate in the sentiments you have addressed to me on the assassination of the President of the United States, and I have given directions to my Minister at Washington to make known to the government of that country the feeings which you entertain, in common with myself and my whole people, with regard to this deplorable event.

In the House of Lords, on the same evening, Lord Ravensworth seked Lord Derby to explain the sense in which, in the debate in reference to the assassination of President Lincoln, he had used words implying that if the Confederates in any way connected themselves with which, in the debate in reference to the assassination of President Lincoln, he had used words implying that if the Confederates in any way connected themselves with, or justified the perpetrators of, this great crime, they would commit worse than a crime—a gross blunder. The expression was capable of being misinterpreted, but he believed it was used in the sense in which the same remark was applied by Prince Talleyrand to the conduct of the First Consul in reference to the murder of the Duke D'En, hien, namely, that the crime thus committed was a political blunder, fraught with even more serious consequences than a crime.

The Earl of Drans's said he did not think it possible that any misconception could calk as to the sense in which he used the words. What he did say was this:—That he entirely disbelieved that the Confederate authorists, from their former character, would give their approval or sanction to this horrible crime, or that they would not view it with feelings of the utmost abhorrence; and he added that if it were otherwise they would be guilty not only of a crime, but, using the well known political aphorism employed by Prince Talleyrand, they would be guilty of what was worse than a crime—a blunder; meaning thereby that they would be sanctioning what was not only highly immoral in itself, but that which could do nothing but inflict the most serious in jury upon their political cause. It was in that sense only that he used the term.

Public Meetings of Condolence.

Public meetings and resolutions of sympathy with the American people continue to pour in from all quarters, and it is clear that almost every public body in England must have given expression to its sympathy. Among the latest demonstrations was one by the workingment of London, who, in addition to resolutions of condolence, adepted one rejoieting at the recent Union successes and the destruction of shavery.

I The Liverpool Chamber of Commerce had held a special meeting to recerd its profound sorrow and indignation. The resolution asys:—While expressing their deep sympathy with the Chambers of Commerce of the United States, and through them with the nation fat large, on this national calamity, they fervently hope is may not delay the return of peace and confidence to an amiliar country.

At Barito, on the 2d lust, the address of sympathy the Fashion Course. At Berlin, on the 2d inst., the address of sympathy from the Chamber of Deputies was presented to the American Minister. His Excellency, in reply, thanked the Chamber, in the name of the United States government and people, for the sympathy expressed by the rembers of so illustrious and in every way so disting sished an assembly. He lamented the great loss susained by the death of Mr. Lincoln. He also extelled the great services rendered by the Germans to the cause of the Union, and said that America would never forget what the Germans had done for her cause. Mr. Seward as we better. His death would be almost as great a loss as was that of Mr. Lincoln. The death of the President would create no change in the policy of the North Lincoln's greatest merit was that he had faithfully carried out the will of the people, and the will of the people had remained the same. There was no fear of any change, for Andrew Johnson was a stateman tested during a long public career, and elected the same time as Abraham Lincoln.

THE CAPTURE OF JEFF. DAYIS.

How the Announcement of the Arrest was Received in Richmond,

Ms. William H. Merriam's Despat

The official announcement of the capture of Jeff. Dav Stanton came to hand last evening. Major General Halleck, commanding, had the gratifying news posted city, wherein now resides the commander of the grand military division of the James. The announcement of the news upon the streets "by word of mouth," or under the questionable auspices of rumor, did not gain general credence. When, however, it came to be known that General Halleck had mitigated his well known military lic in his own vestibule, speculators of all classes began to believe that Jeff. Davis had been caught and would be delivered to "Andy Johnson." For the past ten days it is inferred that the stately fugitives must have fled with delivered to "Andy Johnson." For the past ten days it is inferred that the stately fugitives must have fled with amazing celerity, from the fact that they overcame, in their flight, an almost incredible number of miles in an incredibly whort space of time. The party, when caught, were travelling for dear life, and when arrested they were for some time previously so closely pursued by the urgent cavalry that breathless especies with them gave way to piteous impiorings on the part of the service attendants to spare the great rebel, so imminent did they believe death to be waiting upon his tremendous transgressions. Such of the people of Richmond as habitated here previous to the federal occupancy and during the war are perfectly appalled at the humiliation that has befailen the "President of the Confederate States;" and they already know mere than they ever knew before of the fallacy of undertaking to uphold the heresy of "State rights," the dogmas of treason, and live on this orb. The original people here did not, throughout yesterday, seem capable of realizing, so great was their profound astonishment, that their traiterous chieftain was not only in the hands of the federal authorities, but would, before many days more could clapse, swing, a spectacle in treason for the world to behold. The popular impression here is that Jeff. Davis will be hung in explation of his crimes. I do not loarn that there is any objection to God's speeding the day.

Hon. John A. Griswold, member of Congress from New York, arrived here direct from Washington on Saturday evening, with, it is understood, confidential despatches from the President to General Halleck.

Prize Fight Between Davis and Dunn for $4,000. DUNN THE VICTOR IN FORTY-THREE ROUNDS IN ONE HOUR AND EIGHT MINUTES.

HOUR AND RIGHT MINUTES.

The prize fight between James Dunn, of Brooklyn, and William M. Davis, of California, for $4,000, came of yesterday morning at Metamora, Pike county, Pa. The fight lasted one hour and eight minutes, during which time forty-three rounds were fought. Dunn won the fight easily, his superior knowledge of the art of self-defence over his opponent carrying him through without much punishment. Davis was badly beaten about the head, and when the sponge was thrown up in token of his defeat be was quite blind. Dunn won the first event of the fight, that is "first blood," while Davis wen the second event, "the first knock dewn." Dunn fought at the head throughout, and his blows were very heavily rendered, while Davis struck mostly at the body, but was generally short, and did not do much execution. Davis was the largest and strongest man, and in the wrestling generally managed to throw Dunn, but he was very deficient in science, could not stop the blows of his adversary, and hence his defeat. There was a large attendance of the roughs; but they evidently were on their good behavior, and everything passed off peaceably.

Before Judges Ingraham, Clerk and Wells May 10.—The People of Bernard Pricry.—The defend-ant in this care, it will be recollected, was convicted of the murder of Harry Lazarus, and sentenced to be hanged. His counsel obtained a writ of error, however, and the argument was set down for to-day. The court room was crowded with an anxious concourse of shoulder hitters and fancy men, who seemed to take an unusual interest in the proceedings.

Mr. McKeon, counsel for the prisoner, objected to the case being argued this term, on the ground that the return to the write of error was not filed until the first of May, and notice of argument having been served before that date the proceedings were irregular.

The Court announced that it would render a decision in the matter to-morrow morning.

Similar objections were made in the Lamb and Ferris cases.

noon, shows signs of temporary improvement. The mo-netary stringency which some predicted, and in anti-cipation of which the bears put out "shorts" rather freely, will not be felt, although a more active money market may. This will not, however, be opposed anything more important. Money was in abundant sup-ply at five per cent to day, and the transactions at six were exceptional. The amount of commercial paper offering for discount is small, and the best grade is quoted at 6 a 8 per cent. The subscriptions to the seven-thirty loan, owing to the admirable machinery by which it is worked, in nowise disturb the even current of Although the enormous sum of nearly forty mil-lions was subscribed by Mr. Jay Cooke's agents on Saturday last, no perceptible difference was observable in consequence in the flow of money through its remaining series of the loan—amounting to less than two hundred and thirty millions—may be absorbed, the result is likely to be the same. Its increase has altogether been so unparalleled since Mr. Jay Cooke assumed the agency practical financier, or the patriotic enthusiasm of the people who respond so grandly to the fiscal calls of the government; and the United States may well pride itself upon the great financial achievement which will make the seven-thirty loan historical.

Foreign exchange remains dull but firm. Leading drawers ask 109% a 110 for their sixty days bills, but transactions have taken place at 109%.
